To Nannie

- Ollie the Ostrich could not fly.
"Why can't I fly?"

"Bluebirds can fly.
Eagles can fly.
Even chickens can...
sort of fly.
Why can't I?"

Ollie tried to hide from his problem.
"Maybe if I put my head in the sand it will go away."

"CAN I HELP YOU!!!"

Gopher yelled so loud, the other birds began to gather around.
"How come you aren't flying ollie?"
"Yeah I don't think I've seen him fly once."
"Yeah, you're so big, I bet you are great at flying!"

"Let's go."
"Suit yourself"
"I don't care.
I don't want to fly."

Once again Ollie was alone. He was too embarassed to tell the other birds he could not fly.

Sometimes this made things harder. Like, the time everyone was flying South for the Winter.

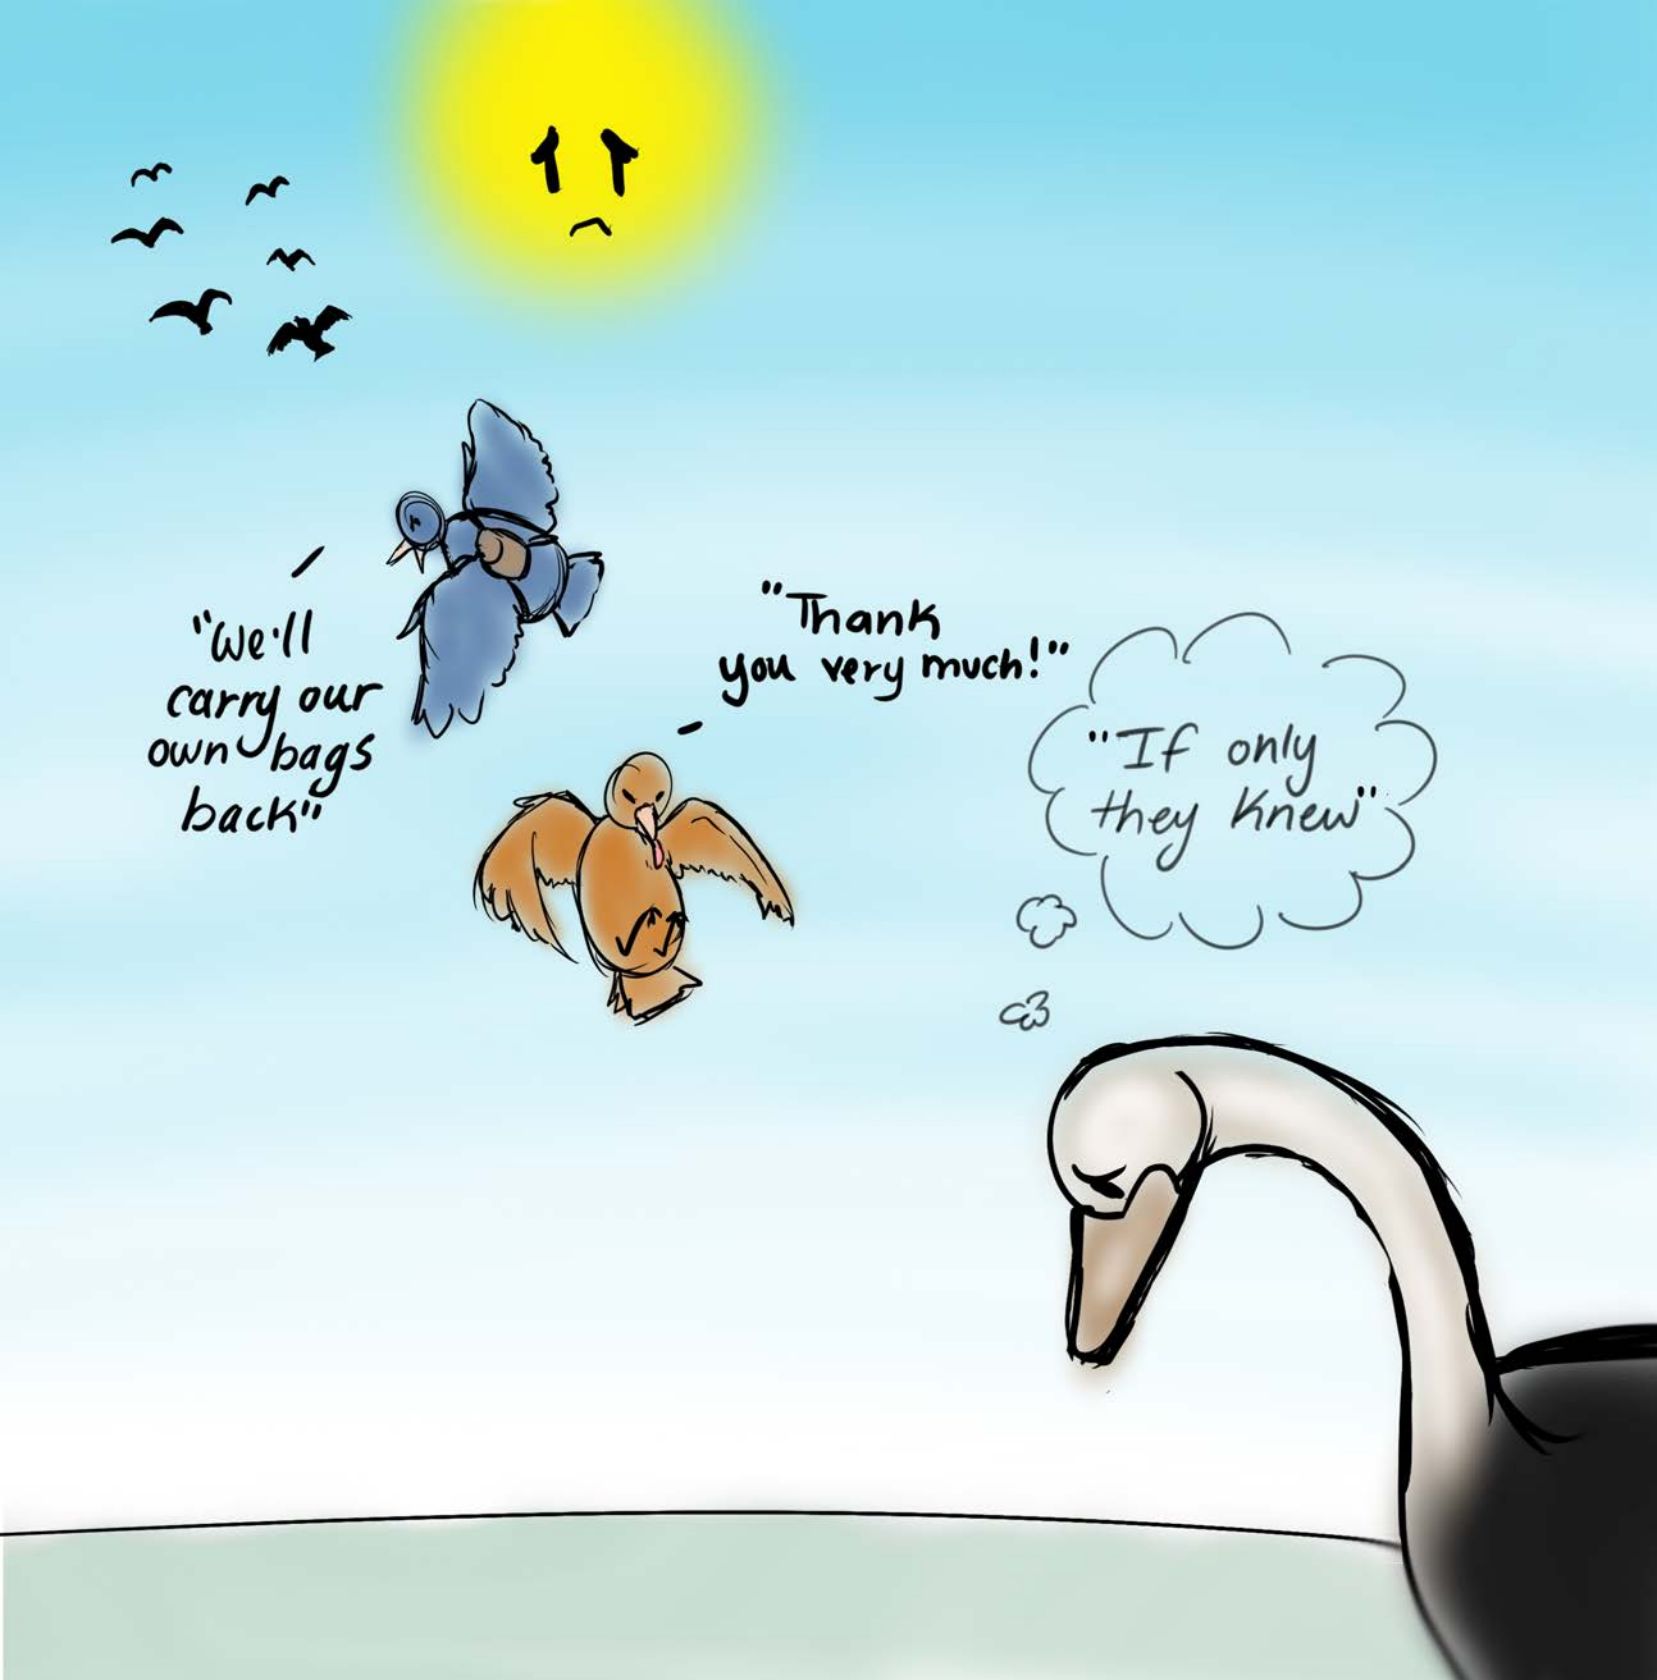

They all thought he flew.-
"Hey Ollie!
you are so big and strong! Can we check our bags with you..?"

By the time he walked there, it was already time to fly home.
"Where have you been?"
"What good are our bathing suits now?"

On the bus ride home Ollie started to get Angry.

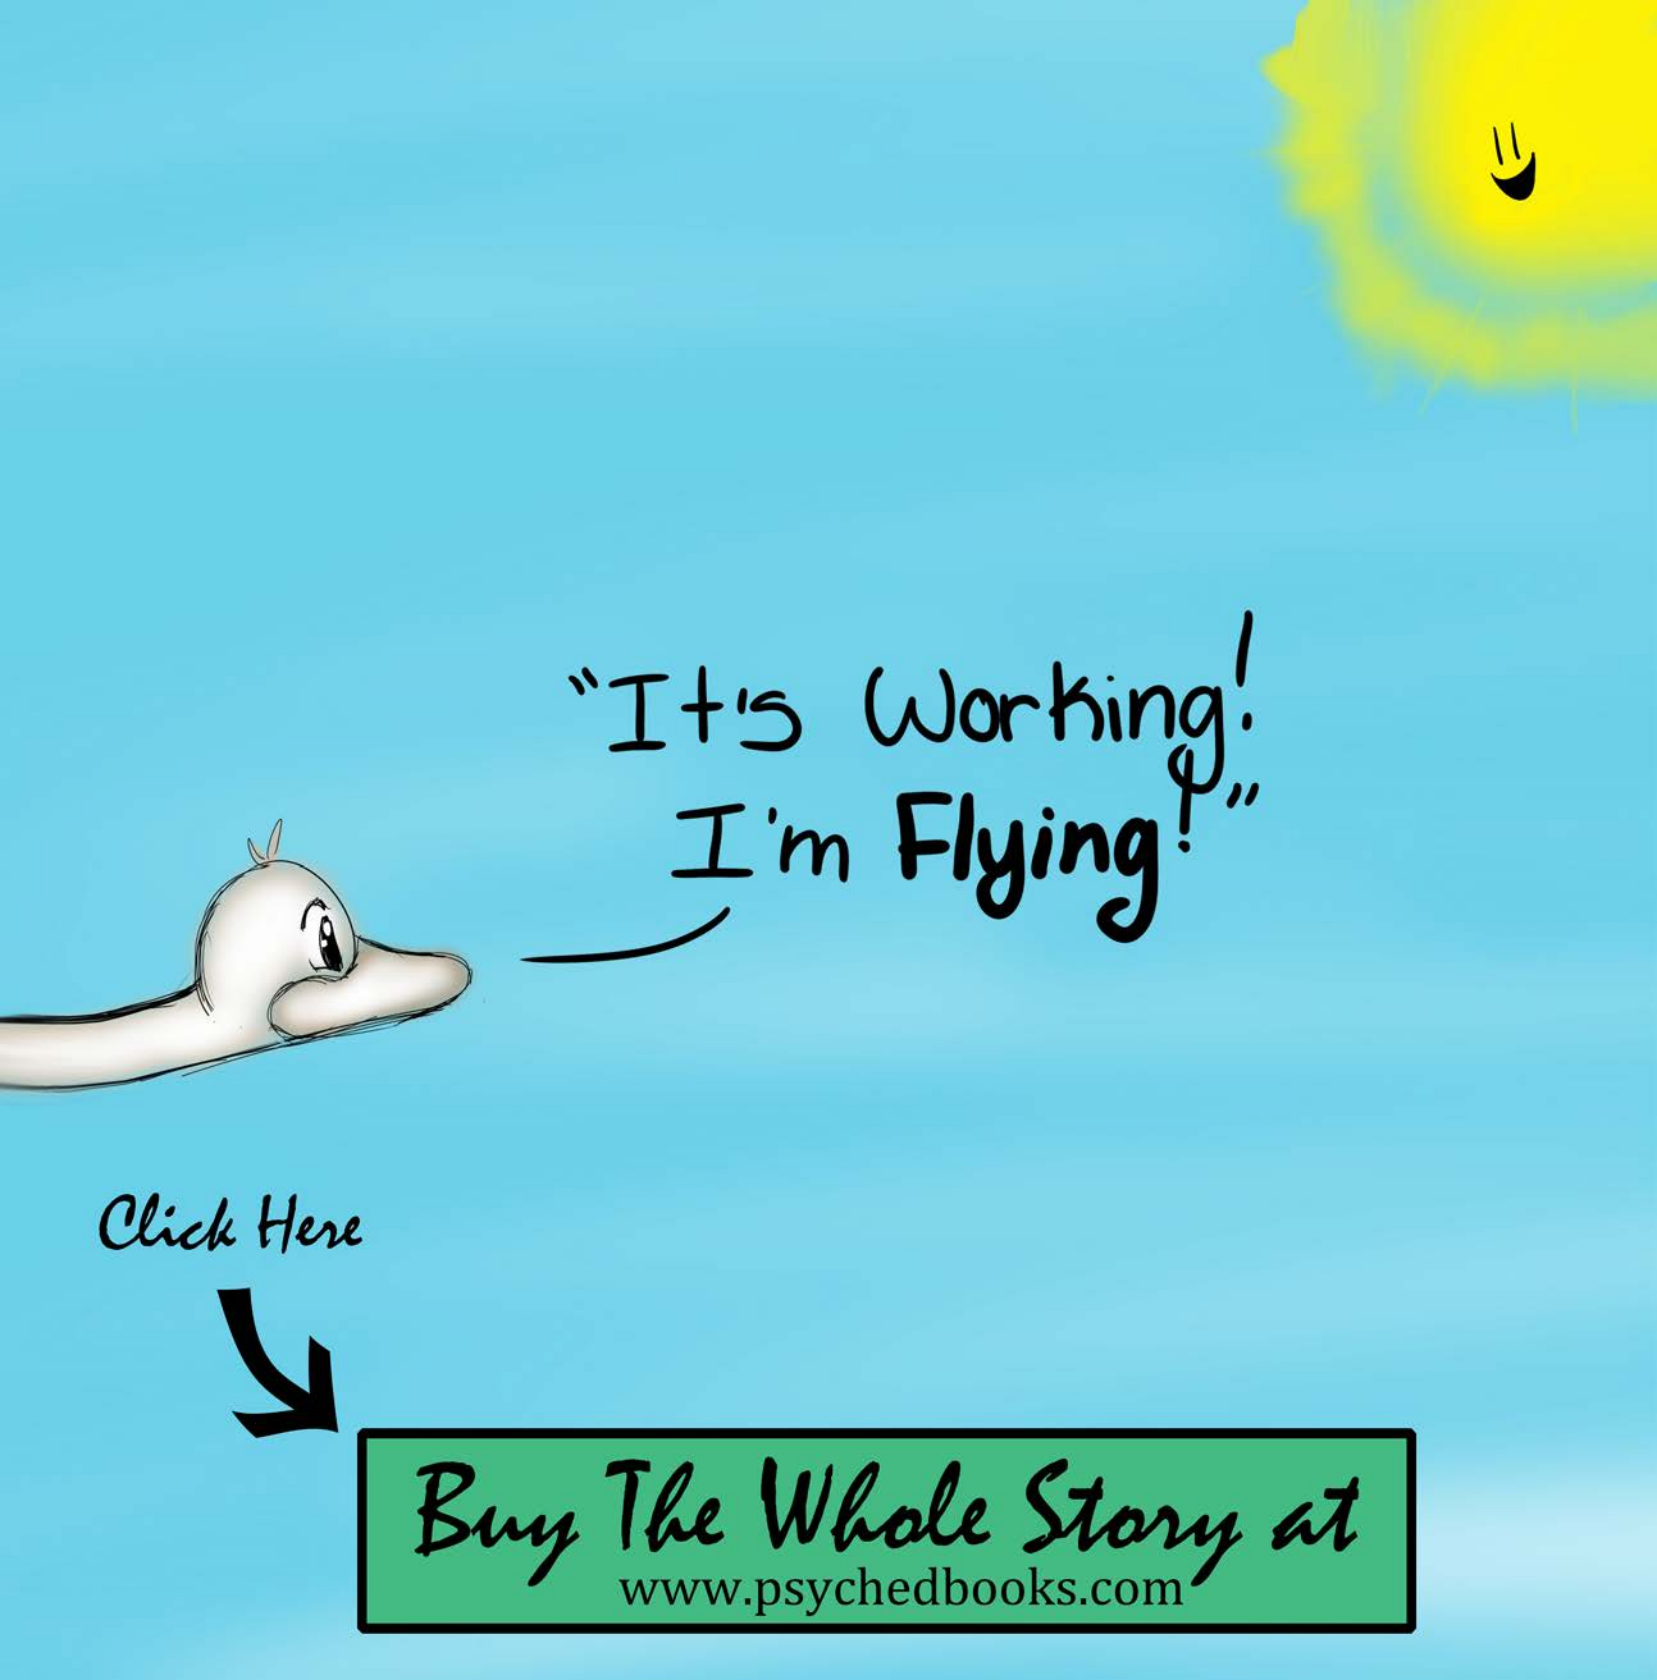

"They all think I'm slow, but they don't even know. I had to carry their bags through mountains, rain and snow!"

"We'll carry our own bags back"
"Thank you very much!"
"If only they knew"

I felt so sad for Ollie.

But birds can be pretty smart when they start working together.

"How An Ostrich The Angry Ostrich Finally Flew."

Ollie the Ostrich is angry because he can't fly like other birds can, but if he is going to solve his problem he is going to have to learn how to collaborate. Ostriches have never been able to fly. Most ostriches have accepted it. Not Ollie. He won't give up on his dream. But, until he finally stops being mad and starts asking for help, his plans keep backfiring. This book is based on psychology research about successful communication. Out of four basic communication styles, Collaboration is the most successful. The other styles are Avoidant, Accommodative, and Competitive. Collaboration is when people work as a team to solve a problem instead of avoiding the problem, acting like they "don't care," or trying only to get their way. This is a story about how an ostrich finally flew when he learned how to collaborate. Ollie hopes that his story helps kids learn about collaborating early on, so they can get what they want most in life too. He also hopes his story helps parents start a dialogue with their kids about better communication strategies so that they never feel like they have to put their head in the sand like he did.
